

A Word From the Chair: Final Reflections

The annual conference in Philadelphia was a success! I was extremely happy with the community and atmosphere of research, teaching and professional development in our sessions. Thank you to everyone who gave their time and support to the History Division. As the outgoing chair, I have enjoyed my time serving as a leader and truly appreciate everyone.

continue »

Panel Proposals for AEJMC 2025 due October 7

The History Division welcomes panel proposals for the 2025 AEJMC conference in San Francisco, Calif., August 6 - 10. The theme for next year's event is "Leading in Times of Momentous Change: Individual and Collective Opportunities." Panel proposals can be submitted via this link.

continue »

Research Q&A: Seven Questions with Matthew Ehrlich

Matthew is a professor emeritus in the College of Media at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. His research focuses on social and cultural history, and his most recent book is The Krebiozen Hoax: How a Mysterious Cancer Drug Shook Organized Medicine (University of Illinois Press, 2024).

continue »

Update on Journalism History's 2024 diversity microgrant winners

In early 2024, Marcus Collins (Loughborough University, UK), Otávio Daros (Pontifical Catholic University of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil), and Ed Timke (Michigan State) were awarded diversity microgrants by Journalism History. Since then, all three have made significant progress on their research.

continue »

Member Q&A: Autumn Linford

Assistant Professor of Journalism, Auburn University
What is your favorite class to teach? Journalism history!
I'm even more thrilled than usual, because next fall I have been approved to teach a Women in Journalism History course to be cross listed with the Women and Gender Studies department! What is your current research project?

continue »

Notes from the History Division Business Meeting

Chair Rachel Grant (Florida) offered a welcome to the 35 members in attendance. Minutes from last year's division business meeting were approved unanimously. Leadership presented an overview of the division's work during the past year: updating the AEJMC Community page for the division, maintaining the website minus a web administrator, continuing to expand international reach and membership, and celebrating 50 years of Journalism History, the division's journal.

continue »

Welcome to the new Clio staff!

The History Division is pleased to welcome the new staff of Clio, who will take over the newsletter starting with the November/December issue.

For the next year, Carolina Velloso (Minnesota) will serve as Clio editor. Please send Carolina any member updates or news for the next newsletter at cvelloso@umn.edu.

Lisa Lenoir (Indiana) will continue to compile the Research Q&A feature. If you've recently published an article, monograph, book chapter, or book and would like to talk about your research process, reach out to Lisa at ldlenoir@iu.edu.

Christoph Mergerson (Maryland) is joining the Clio staff and will be working on the Member Q&A. If you'd like to be featured, send Christoph an email at cm495@umd.edu.

Do you have news for the next issue?

Mailing address: AEJMC History Division, 234 Outlet Pointe Blvd., Ste. A, Columbia, SC, 29210-5667, US